ABSTRACT

Based upon a questionnaire survey of two-year institutions conducted by the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACJC), this directory provides information on 1,230 community, junior, and technical colleges in the United States and its territories, as well as 1978 and 1979 statistics on enrollments and personnel for each. Following introductory material on the compilation of the directory, a data summary, suggestions for interpreting the data, and a list of changes in institutions since the previous year are presented. Next, the directory lists each two-year college alphabetically by state or country and provides the following information: location; chief executive officer; telephone number; year college classes began; type of control or affiliation; AACJC membership; state recognition or accrediting agency; type of academic calendar; October 1978 and 1979 full- and part-time and total enrollment; community education enrollment in 1978-79; full- and part-time and total faculty, professional staff, and administrators as of October 1979; and tuition and fees required in 1979-80. Next, tables are presented summarizing enrollment and personnel data by state for all institutions, and for public and independent colleges. Lists of community, junior, and technical college organizations and state administrators for two-year college education, and an alphabetical listing of colleges conclude the directory. (AYC)

INTRODUCTION

As a service to its member colleges and to other educational and community planners, the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges is pleased to present this 1980 Community, Junior, and Technical College Directory. The publication represents a continuing effort of the national organization to monitor, collect, and report information that will be of use in planning and decision-making at local, state, regional, and national levels.

The Directory is more than a mere roster of institutions, of course, as valuable as such an up-to-date listing may be, for the publication presents a statement through statistics about the numbers of persons being served by the institutions in small towns, rural areas, suburbs, and big cities across the country.

This publication offers data on the number of persons who enrolled in community, junior, and technical colleges in the fall of 1979, and breaks down various categories of enrollments for both 1979 and the previous year. In addition, the Directory provides information on numbers of persons employed as faculty and staff.

For those concerned with growth, this Directory offers good news. Enrollments appear to be up by a higher margin than for the past several years—contradicting earlier predictions of stabilization or even a decline. The percentage increase for fall 1979 over that of fall 1978 is 4.3 percent, according to results of the survey from which the Directory was generated. This does not mean that we can necessarily expect similar increases in the future, but does suggest that the kind of community-based, accessible education offered by community, junior, and technical colleges is becoming increasingly more appealing to Americans of all ages.

The Directory for the first time this year contains the names of 14 regionally accredited proprietary institutions which account, to some degree, for the overall enrollment increase. These institutions enrolled 16,000 plus students. They are included as a result of a change in membership qualifications of the Association—though the Directory itself is not a membership publication. However, only nonprofit institutions have been included in the past.

Information has been collected by questionnaire and the data computerized in order to generate the tables for the Directory. AACJC's data collection office relied on reporting institutions to provide accurate data, and statistics have been checked and double-checked to insure that they meet criteria for inclusion.

Names and addresses of more than 1200 community, junior, and technical colleges are carried in the publication—as well as the names of the chief administrative officers. Accreditation and the type of college control are indicated as well.

The Directory also contains names and addresses of state directors of community and junior college education, and a listing of state and regional organizations of two-year colleges. An analysis of the data is presented by Fontelle Gilbert, associate for data and information who conducted the survey and is editor of the Directory.

We are grateful to the colleges for their prompt and helpful participation.

The Data/Some Interpretations

Fall 1979 enrollment for community, junior, and technical colleges is up by 4.3 percent. Only once in the past 20 years has this growth pattern been interrupted. Fall 1978 enrollment was down −.1 percent, perhaps only a pause in the continued interest in and growth of community-based, lifelong education. Total headcount for credit courses is 4,487,872, an increase over last year's reported 4,304,058.

Enrollment figures for each institution are reported in Table I of the Directory. Where 1979 total enrollment figures were not available, total fall enrollment figures appear. All enrollments are given as headcount figures and include only those students enrolled in courses or programs for credit. Data on enrollment by sex are not published by institution, but are summarized in Table B. Of the four categories, enrollment of full-time men students continues to show the greatest decrease, while female students, both full- and part-time, show continued growth.

Some colleges reported only total enrollment, faculty, professional staff, or administrators rather than the breakdowns requested by the survey form. Because of this discrepancy in reporting patterns, the male and female figures and the full-time/part-time figures shown in these tables will not equal the total figures reported in Tables II, III, and IV.

Similarly, the percentages at the bottom of Table B may be somewhat affected by this discrepancy in reporting.

According to data received from 98 percent of the 1,230 colleges listed in the Directory, enrollment in public colleges rose by 4.2 percent, while independent two-year institutions showed an increase of 6.2 percent. Of the independent colleges the "church-related" group evidenced the most substantial growth.

Table C provides information on distribution by size of enrollment. This table is influenced by the way the institution reports enrollment. If a multi-campus institution reports enrollment for each campus, each campus is counted in the appropriate rank. If the college reports aggregate data, the institution is shown once in that larger category, but the campuses appear in the "not available" column. The 1978 column will reflect colleges that are new to the Directory this year and were therefore not available in 1978.

Increasingly, colleges report growing participation in service, recreational, and life enrichment programs that are not a part of a for-credit, academic program. This participation is reported in the Directory as community education enrollment. Because these programs vary in length, with no clearly defined registration periods, it is difficult to get a clear picture of the magnitude of this important part of community/junior college life. Some institutions do not routinely collect enrollment figures from community education students. Even though this field was frequently left blank on the Directory survey forms, the data continue to show increased participation. Between 1977 and 1978, there was an increase of 8 percent. The total reported number of participants for 1978-79 is 3,420,942, an increase of 11.1 percent over the 3,078,079 reported last year.

This Directory also lists the number of faculty, professional staff, and administrators. Table D illustrates changes in this population over the past four fall terms. For every 100 faculty members there are 7.6 professional staff members and 7.8 administrators. From 1978 to 1979, the ratio of administrators to faculty decreased by 2.1 percent, while the ratio of professional staff to faculty increased 5.5 percent. When comparing total enrollment to total faculty, we find a ratio of 21 students to one faculty member, a ratio that has stayed the same for several years.

Over the four-year period, male employment has shown growth in one area, the area of professional staff (librarians, counselors, learning lab coordinators, etc.). Female employment has shown growth in all three areas—faculty, professional staff, and administrators—with the largest growth occurring in the area of administration. The latter category includes those who spend 50 percent or more of their time in management and administration.

Tuition rose for both public and independent colleges between fall 1978 and 1979. The average tuition for the academic year rose from $394 to $410, an increase of 4 percent for public colleges. The consumer price index for the comparable period, the year ending September 1979, increased 12.1 percent. Independent colleges reported an average tuition of $1,792 in 1978 and $2,019 in fall 1979, an increase of 12.7 percent.

As in the past, data for this Directory were collected directly from all two-year institutions. Each institution received a pre-printed verification form showing the figures reported by the college for the previous year, and explanations for increases or decreases over 20 percent were requested from each college. It is hoped that the use of this system eased the reporting requirements and [illegible]ared increased accuracy of the data.

The Directory includes individual campuses of two-year institutions that are separately listed to arrive at the full number of colleges. Since this method of totaling institutions was started in 1975, differences in the number of colleges from year to year are not solely due to colleges opening or closing. In addition to the method of counting colleges, changes in the total are also caused by mergers, changes in accreditation status, or type of program.

For some institutions, enrollment and other data are reported by campus; for others, the data are aggregated and reported for the college as a whole. A number of colleges offer courses and programs at various centers throughout their communities in secondary schools, churches, and senior centers. Such centers are not included or counted in this Directory.

Enrollment comparisons given in this introduction are based on data as reported for the fall term of 1978 and published in the 1979 Directory. Since the publication of the previous edition, additional information and clarification of enrollment figures have been received, altering slightly the fall 1978 figure, as reported in Tables II, III, and IV of this Directory.

AACJC is grateful to the individuals at both member and nonmember institutions who carefully completed the Directory survey forms. It is because of their efforts that we can present this detailed report on community, junior, and technical colleges.

Questions concerning the data reported in the Directory can be referred to the AACJC data office.
